MONDAY, FEB. 8, 1886.

THE Irish question has at last become greater than the politicians. For fifty years it has been growing so rapidly that it has outgrown some very economic but inhuman theories. The London Times lately suggested what might have been accomplished fifty years ago, viz: exclude Irish representatives from the House of Commons and proclaim martial law in Ireland. If England is wise she will not follow the advice of the London Times; it is now too late to coerce Ireland and there is but one thing that will keep peace in the British political family—give Irishmen the rights they demand for Ireland.

LONDON editors are never satisfied until they succeed in showing the world how totally ignorant they can be about the political history of every country that is not English. A late number of the London Times says editorially: "American Presidents tend to be chosen from among men who have few enemies, because they have done nothing great enough to excite vigorous emotion of any kind." This, written in the face of the history of American Presidents, without making exceptions of men like Jackson and Grant, is sufficient to make an American school boy laugh, and ought to make intelligent Englishmen, who have had the good fortune to get outside of London fog, blush for the one time reputation of the Times.

The practical results of the silver money theory are already being felt in the United States. Secretary Manning is making a brave fight to keep gold from being driven from circulation and manfully declares that he believes he can bridge the threatened alternative of paying the Government debt in silver, during his term of office; but he adds that, "unless Congress takes some action, this will be inevitable." How the silver men would kick if the Government of the United States commenced paying their gold bearing bonds in silver! Driven to their last stand, the silver men of the United States are now demanding that, "no money be appropriated for printing any kind of paper money in less than $10 denominations, so that as that in use wears out, silver dollars will have to be used for all lesser sums." This is at best but a poor financial subterfuge to prolong the existence and standard of a fluctuating currency.

Much political talk and religious controversy have occurred since Charles Bradlaugh first refused to take the oath of office. He has made a long and stubborn fight for his belief and has been almost as much of a fanatic as some of those who have opposed him from a sectarian standpoint. Since his re-election to the last English Parliament, the question of his taking his seat has been previously so discussed and re-discussed that there is now but little doubt that he will be allowed to enter the House of Commons, after having been so often elected thereto in vain. Many people, however, who have looked no further into the merits of the fight than its religious aspect exposed, have doubtless overlooked the real political fact which has been the true cause of the opposition to Mr. Bradlaugh. The present Parliament of England is beyond all question just as religious as the Parliaments which have preceded it, but the present Parliament is not quite as aristocratic as those which have gone before. Now, as Mr. Bradlaugh's real crime consisted in being a democrat, his infidelity was taken advantage of by the aristocracy of England to check the encroachments of the representatives of the people. Mr. Parnell has aided Mr. Bradlaugh and Mr. Bradlaugh has aided Mr. Parnell, although they have been seemingly in direct opposition to each other from a religious standpoint. Political and religious freedom have taken another stride forward in England and such revolutions seldom retrograde.

GLADSTONE in a late interview expressed the rather egotistical opinion that England and Russia are the only two European powers that have a political future. It seems strange that the man who has failed to keep England at the point where Disraeli left her, now takes occasion to prophesy that Germany and France will soon disappear as first class political powers. It seems to us that Mr. Gladstone is missing some very essential historical and statistical facts in his logical process, but then the same thing occurred to many when Gladstone formulated a political theory for England, which, by the way, was something more of a failure than the political theories of Government followed by France and Germany. Mr. Gladstone now asserts, since he has fallen from power, that the political futures of England and Russia depend upon colonization, which these two countries are alone able to carry out. We are willing to admit Mr. Gladstone's premise that the "vital resources of the States of Europe are rapidly exhausting," but we decline to make an exception of England, whatever we may do in the case of Russia.

FOREIGN NEWS.

Three New States Proposed.

NEW YORK, January 19.—A Washington special to the Post says: Last week Senator Voorhees introduced a bill to admit Washington Territory as a State, and yesterday he introduced a bill to admit Montana as a State. The Senator was asked if he intended to make the admission of Dakota conditional on the admission of Montana, as it has been reported that the Democrats were disposed to do. He replied: "I can speak only for myself. I think the best arrangement we can make is to admit Dakota, Montana and Washington Territory together. They must all come in soon, and they might as well come in now. I do not see how we can prevent Dakota's coming in. She has a voting population of 80,000, and is certainly entitled to admission. I thought at first that I should oppose the division of Dakota, but I do not see how I can. The Territory has an area of five times my own State, and South Dakota will be about as large as Ohio and Indiana. Montana has a voting population of 40,000. There are not fifteen Congressional districts in the country with the population of Washington, and not a hundred with that of Montana. Dakota is Republican. Montana is Democratic, and I am confident will remain so. Washington is close, and may be won by either party. If she comes into the Union by Democratic votes under this Administration, our chances in the new State will be all the better. It seems to me much the best plan to take in these three Territories at once. They are entitled to it, and politically it will be as fair and equal an arrangement as can be made." Several prominent Democrats are reported to agree with Mr. Voorhees. Mr. Springer expresses the opinion that the House Committee on Territories will report favorably on the division and admission of Dakota, unless the party shall caucus upon the subject. In that event, it is his opinion that the decision would be adverse.

John Bright to his constituents: "Cast your eyes back for a moment on the reign of the Queen. Do you imagine the reign of the Queen is remarkable as a reign of peace, and that heaven should be thanked for the long peace we have enjoyed? How much peace have you enjoyed? A great many other people, at your cost, have not enjoyed it. Three wars with China, the most peaceful empire in the world; a war with Burma; I know not how many wars in South Africa, even before the Zulu war; a war in Crimea of the greatest proportions; two Afghan wars, in one of which not less than sixty thousand camels died of hunger, thirst, and over-labor; another war in Egypt; and I assert that it was not possible for anybody to form, I will not say a just defense, but a reasonable excuse, for the wars that have been waged by this country during the reign of the Queen."

"Am I on the right road to the village?" demanded a traveler of an old dandy who was working in a field. "Yaas, sah," said the dandy. The traveler pursued his way, but presently returned, very mad. "I tol' yo' de truf, deed I did, boss," replied the dandy, "but yo' tuk de wrong direkshun, sah."
